Eat, Sleep, Repeat: How Kids’ Daily Routines Can Help Prevent Obesity
This article (Aubrey 2017) reviews a recent study that found preschool-age children who did not have a set sleep routine were more likely to be overweight at age 11. Other studies that examine the links between other habits such as evening meals and limited screen time on obesity were also reviewed.

II. Recent Reports & Research

Effects of Posted Point-Of-Sale Warnings on Alcohol Consumption During Pregnancy and on Birth Outcomes*
(Cil 2017)

ABSTRACT:
In 23 states and Washington D.C., alcohol retailers are required by law to post alcohol warning signs (AWS) that warn against the risks of drinking during pregnancy. Using the variation in the adoption of these laws across states and within states over time, the researcher found a statistically significant reduction in prenatal alcohol use associated with AWS. The author then used this plausibly exogenous change in drinking behavior to establish a causal link between prenatal alcohol exposure and birth outcomes. The findings indicate that AWS laws are associated with decreases in the odds of very low birth weight and very pre-term birth.

Polyamory in Canada: Research on an Emerging Family Structure
(The Vanier Institute of the Family 2017)

EXCERPT:
The Canadian Research Institute for Law and the Family began a study of perceptions of polyamory in Canada in June 2016. The project is only midway through its course, but the data collected so far have important implications for law and policy in the coming decades, as the meaning of family continues to evolve. People who are polyamorous are, or prefer to be, involved in more than one intimate relationship at a time. Some polyamorists are involved in stable, long-term, loving relationships involving two or more other people. Others are simultaneously engaged in a number of relationships of varying degrees of permanence and commitment. Still others are involved in a web of concurrent relationships ranging from short-term relationships that are purely sexual in nature to more enduring relationships characterized by deep emotional attachments.

In summary:

- Polyamory: The practice or condition of participating in more than one intimate relationship at a time. It is usually not related to religion and it is unrelated to marriage.
- Polygamy: The practice or condition of having more than one spouse, typically a wife, at one time, usually for religious reasons.

The research to date on polyamory in Canada found:

- Most of the respondents to the survey live in British Columbia (144), followed by Ontario (116), Alberta (71) and Quebec (37). Respondents tend to be younger than the general Canadian population, with 75% of respondents being between the ages of 25 and 44, compared to 26% of the general population, and only 16% of respondents being age 45 or older, compared to 44% of the general population.
- Almost one-quarter of the survey respondents (23.2%) said that at least one child under the age of 19 lives full-time in their household under the care of at least one parent or guardian, and 8.7% said that at least one child lives part-time in their household under the care of at least one parent or guardian.

III. Current Initiatives

World Maternal Mental Health Awareness Day: May 3

An international task force met in late 2015 to start making plans for the first ever World Maternal Mental Health Day. The group decided that the event should be held each year on the first Wednesday of May, close to “Mother’s Day” and “Mental Health Week” in many countries. Before long the task force had grown to include representatives from around the globe, all with a common goal of increasing awareness of maternal mental health issues.

Measuring Rural Community Vitality – A Rural Ontario Institute Initiative
May 11, 2017: Webinar

For more than a decade, Canadian researchers and policy makers have focused on measuring the well-being of Canadian residents on a number of domains, including Community Vitality which measures the activity, strength, and inclusiveness of relationships within a community. Recognizing that rural communities are distinct from urban areas in numerous ways, the Rural Ontario Institute (ROI) undertook the Measuring Rural Community Vitality Initiative (MRCVI). Learn more about this applied research and analysis initiative examining effective practices for quantifying rural civic engagement, social capital and community well-being.

Literacy Engagements – Fostering Energy and Passion for Reading and Writing
May 13, 2017: Saint John, NB

The pathways to literacy learning are as multiple and diverse as the children themselves. Supporting children’s literate identities in ways that energize and fuel children’s motivation to read, write, represent, and talk requires rigorous, intellectual work on the part of early childhood educators and children. This full day workshop will engage and inspire early childhood educators who are responsible for supporting the unique literate journeys of children from age 3 to 8.
Addressing Inequity in Canada through Early Childhood Education
June 2, 2017: Toronto, ON

The Summer Institute is an annual collaboration between the School of Early Childhood at George Brown College and the Atkinson Centre for Society and Child Development at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education/University of Toronto. The Institute strives to offer timely information to inform research, policy and practice. Research tells us that quality early childhood education can be a game-changer for children, particularly those from disadvantaged backgrounds. Yet many policies and practices prevent racialized, Indigenous and vulnerable children from participating in early childhood programs or stream them into low quality settings. A new framework for early learning and childcare is in development. Canadian jurisdictions are using the occasion to update their early childhood policies. It is important that change be informed by evidence and viewed through an equity lens.

Infographic: Women, Caregiving and Work in Canada

Caregiving is a fact of life and a common family experience in Canada. And while the gap between women and men has lessened over the past generation, caregivers have historically been disproportionately women, and this remains true today. Research also shows that on average, women in Canada devote more time to caregiving tasks than men and are more likely to experience negative consequences as a result of their caregiving. Women are also more likely to report performing what has been considered “traditionally female” tasks, such as housekeeping, meal preparation and personal/medical care (Vanier 2017).

Fairness for Children: Inequality in Child Well-Being Within Wealthy Nations: Webinar Recording and Presentation

This webinar featured Lisa Wolff, presenting “UNICEF Report Card 13: Fairness for Children – Inequality in child well-being within wealthy countries.” The UNICEF Index of Child Inequality reveals the degree to which disadvantaged children fall behind the ‘average’ child in aspects of health, education, income, and life satisfaction in wealthy countries. Broad inequality affects many aspects of child and youth well-being, limiting the potential of all children, not only those who fall furthest behind. Closing the inequality gaps between children in the middle and those at the bottom, should improve well-being for all Canada’s children.
